

Doug Schacke, LSW

Doug Schacke is a licensed social worker who is a relationally-focused therapist and certified substance abuse counselor who works with adolescents, adults, couples, families and groups. He has a Bachelor of Arts (History) and Masters of Science in Higher Education Administration from Northwestern University and a Masters in Social Work from Loyola University Chicago.

Doug believes strongly in an empathetic, collaborative and client-centered approach to psychotherapy. He has a background in treating individuals with substance use disorders, anxiety, depression, social-emotional concerns, sexual and gender identities, adjustment issues and more. He works closely with the law enforcement community, the LGBT community and educational institutions. He belongs to the National Association of Social Workers (NASW).

In addition to being a psychotherapist, he serves as a facilitator for the Anti-Defamation League's (ADL) educational programs and work at Loyola University as an adjunct instructor and manager of a program designed to prepare social work students to treat individuals with opioid use disorder and other substance use disorders.
